Dear Turbine Hiring Manager,

I am writing to you in regard to your job posting on the Turbine website regarding the QA tester position for one of your mobile titles. With my Bachelor's Degree in Video Game Design from Fitchburg State University and prior experience in quality assurance, I believe I have the overall skills necessary to apply myself and excel in this role.

Over my 4 years of college, I have developed the skills necessary to adapt. I've been an individual contributor or lead a small team in roles such as quality assurance, and project lead. I have applied myself in producer roles in which I taught myself time management and I continue to teach myself about every aspect of the design process from engineering to asset creation. I may describe myself as an artist, but this does not define me as a person. It is my hope to one day see my dream fulfilled and be apart of a studio where I can see my own creative vision to completion. I believe that Turbine can help me on the path to my dream by fostering superior skills in both quality assurance and learning more about the game design pipeline which I already have some experience in.

I have attached two versions of my resume which document my experience in two different ways. Both resumes show a different side to myself; one being my professionalism and the other being my creativity. I believe to be an effective QA tester you need both qualities to be successful. As thorough as my resume might be, my passion for teamwork and collaboration may not come across. My whole life I have participated in soccer and I attribute it to my innate ability to collaborate with a team in addition to leading one. This, among others, is one of my outstanding qualities that I take pride in. If there is work to be done, I will ensure that my superior work ethic accomplishes the task necessary to see the project to completion. That includes aiding fellow team members and taking on more responsibilities should that be needed.

If you have any questions, please feel free to contact me using the contacts above. I look forward to hearing from you.
